

Bucks To Sponsor Community College

By JIM STANTON
Courier-Times Staff Writer

The Bucks County Commissioners agreed yesterday to sponsor a Community College.

The announcement came as a surprise, for as recently as two weeks ago, Chairman John J. Bodley said that no decision would be made until the end of the summer.

Bodley said he hoped classes could begin in Sept. 1965 but that he was not optimistic about this.

Bodley gave these reasons for the sudden disclosure:

1. An independent study by the board resulted in "a growing realization" that the two-year public college could best be sponsored by the commissioners.
2. The board must make application to the state by June 30. Bodley leaves for a European vacation next Thursday.
3. If sponsorship were left to the various school districts some might balk at the proposal thus depriving youngsters of the educational opportunities enjoyed by other youngsters in the county.

Statute imposes a ceiling of five mills in any one year.

The state department of public instruction will rule on the application before Sept. 30, Bodley said. If approved, the commissioners would appoint a board of trustees to put the plan into effect.

In issuing his statement yesterday, in Doylestown, Bodley said that he was speaking only for himself and that the two other board members could speak for themselves.

Broken Back Suffered By Sen. Kennedy

SOUTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy suffered a broken back and two other men were killed when a light plane crashed last night in dense fog in an apple orchard.

Kennedy was in fair condition at Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in nearby Northampton.

Doctors said, "There are no head injuries and no neurological findings. He has complete use of his legs and hands."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and his wife, Marvella, who also were aboard the plane en route to the Massachusetts Democratic convention, were less seriously hurt. They were reported dying "extremely well."

Dr. Thomas Corriden, senior surgeon, said the 32-year-old Kennedy "has improved considerably since admission and is resting comfortably. X-rays . . . show he has fractures of the fifth and sixth ribs on the

Morrisville Host Today To Firemen

Bucks County Fire Marshal Fred K. Hibbs last night said the fire losses in Bucks County for the last year amounted to $6,240,470.

The 1962 losses were $1,311,800. The 1963 figure represents an increase of $4,928,670.

Hibbs, submitting his annual report at the 51st annual convention of the Bucks County Firemen's Association in Morrisville, said, "The losses are very high because of several large fires in Lower Bucks, one of which amounted to $3,000,000." He was referring to the complete destruction of the Atlantic Thrift Center, Fairless Hills, last fall.

Insurance on last year's losses, he said, amounted to $13,615,000, and property and damage or "at risk" was valued at $54,990,994.

The county fire marshal made 154 investigations and 67 juveniles and adults were apprehended for setting fires.

The fires included 567 dwellings, 90 barns and garages, 1,249 field and woods fires, 324 vehicles, 145 electrical appliances, 109 business places, six schools, 28 chimneys, and 122 Miscellaneous causes. Eighty-one false alarms were reported.

Three Lose Lives

Three persons lost their lives by fire last year.

Ralph Davis, president of the Union Fire Co., Morrisville, welcomed 122 firemen representing 39 volunteer fire fighting units.

Paul W. Myers, Perkaskie fire chief, was re-elected president and begins his second and final term.

Girls Treated For Shock

Two teen-age girls were treated for shock last night after a car accident on Route 13 at 2nd Ave., Bristol.

Taken to Lower Bucks Hospital, treated and released, were Sandra Lee Chance, 17, of 1048 Bath Road, one of the motorists, and Blanca Ibarrodo, 19, a passenger in a car driven by Guilio Rivera, 34, of 238 Hayes St., Bristol.

The accident occurred at 9 p.m. Bristol police said Rivera was charged with failure to yield the right of way and reckless driving.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most sweeping civil rights bill since the Reconstruction era, passed by the Senate after the longest battle in its history, will be the law of the land by the Fourth of July.

That was the promise of House leaders today as they cranked up legislative machinery to send the bill to the White House not later than July 2 or 3.

The Senate bill will be received by the House Monday at 11 a.m., EDT. Because the Senate version of the measure is, in effect, a lengthy amendment to the House-passed rights bill, the House must now vote to accept or reject the Senate's changes.

One cloud on the bill's horizon is a long-simmering political feud in the House which still is unresolved. The dispute centers on a Republican promise to help clear roadblocks for quick House approval if the Democrats agree to a pre-convention recess on July 3. No such agreement has been reached as yet, but House leaders—without disclosing—indicated they expected no trouble.

Reps. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y. and William M. McCulloch, R-Ohio, the authors of the bill that passed the House Feb. 10, said that not all the changes made by the Senate during its 83 days of debate were to their liking.

Urge House Acceptance

"However, we believe that none of the amendments do serious violence to the purpose of the bill," they said in a joint statement urging House acceptance of the Senate amendments.

Speaker John W. McCormack D-Mass., hailing the Senate's action as a major new step toward equality under law, signaled for the fastest possible House action to concur with the Senate changes and ready the bill for signature by President Johnson.

The bill passed by the Senate on a 73 to 27 roll call vote Friday night after a historic debate gives the federal government vast powers, unequalled since the Civil War almost a century ago. It aims at erasing racial discrimination in voting, schools, employment, federal aid programs and in access to public accommodations and many private businesses open to the public.

It has been in the legislative mill for a year. It was proposed by the late President John F. Kennedy on June 19, 1963, then embraced and pushed to passage by his successor, President Johnson.

LBJ Hails Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Americans of every race and creed faced a challenge from President Johnson today to join in making the provisions of the newly passed civil rights bill "the customs of our land."

The President, on a speech-making trip to the West Coast, issued a statement in San Francisco shortly after the Senate approved the controversial measure Friday night, exactly a year after it was first requested by the late President John F. Kennedy.

Johnson hailed the action as "a major step toward equal opportunities for all Americans," and said that while no law can eliminate prejudice, the bill will go further "to invest the rights of man with the protection of law than any legislation in this century."

Woman Dies, Autopsy Set

An autopsy has been ordered into the death of a Trenton woman who died in transit to her home after being released from Lower Bucks Hospital.

The woman, Bonita Federizio, 38, of 122 Monmouth St. died last night in an ambulance of the Bucks County Rescue Squad.

She was reportedly taken to the hospital yesterday morning by Bristol Township police after being discovered in a parking lot in Croydon in a drunken condition.

The autopsy was scheduled to be performed this morning by Coroner John C. Black.

Crowded Galleries Cheer Senate Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For a brief, hushed moment even the relentless sweep of history seemed to stay its course.

Then, in the droning, business-as-usual voice Senate clerks seem to favor on such occasions, the vote on the 122nd roll call was announced — 73 ayes, 27 nays. The longest battle in the Senate's history was over. The civil rights bill had passed.

The crowded galleries, which included Negroes, clergymen, tourists and senators' wives and relatives, burst into applause, against Senate rules. Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., acting as presiding officer, gavelled for order.

But the outburst was understandable for few issues before the Senate — often called the world's greatest deliberative body — aroused the emotion the rights bill had.

Its passage late on the 83rd day of debate carried implications certain to be felt far beyond the Senate chamber. The measure gives the federal government vast powers to erase racial discrimination in voting, schools, employment, federal aid programs and in access to public facilities and many private businesses open to the public.

Shortly before the final roll call, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., in a final speech in support of the bill, said:

"It will not be denied. It will not be stayed. And mankind, thank God, goes forward."

His voice booming through the chamber, Dirksen told the Senate the bill was thrust forward by the same "inexorable moral forces" that produced other great acts of Congress in past times of strife.

At 7 p.m. EDT, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., gained the floor for his closing speech. He paid high tribute to Dirksen for what he described as the Illinois senator's "finest hour" of Senate service. He declared there was no room for "unwarranted sentiments of victory."

Everything Set For Levittown's 3rd Music Jubilee

By SCOOP LEWIS
Courier-Times Staff Writer

Six stand-out drum and bugle corps from three states will compete tonight in the third annual Levittown Musical Jubilee under the lights at the Bristol Township Athletic Field.

Defending their title won last year will be the Vasella Musketeers of Philadelphia who will be seeking top prize of $300 and a second leg on the C. Russell (Pop) Murphy Trophy.

Tonight's competition, being staged by the Parents Association of the Levittown Junior Drum and Bugle Corps, will commence at 8 o'clock on the Woodrow Wilson High School football field located at Green Lane and Mill Creek Road, Levittown.

Exhibition

Besides the six corps competing for over $1,000 in prizes, the host Levittown corps, "The Pennsylvanians," will perform in exhibition tonight. The 70 local boys and girls, ranging in age from seven to 17 years, will be led by their popular drum major, William (Little Wild Bill) Toomey of Harrisburg.

Another large throng is expected to witness the precision marching, blare of bugles and snare of drums tonight. Some 2,500 spectators saw the Robert W. Bracken American Legion Post 382 Cavaliers of Bristol win a "photo finish" victory over the St. Catherine's Queensmen of St. Albans, N.Y., in the first Jubilee two years ago.

Last year, 3,000 persons sat in hot, humid 87-degree temperatures as the Vasella Musketeers upended the Bracken Cavaliers in another hair-line decision.

Besides the Vasella Musketeers, corps competing tonight will be the Belles of St. Mary's of Gloucester, N.J.; the York White Roses of York, Pa.; the Hawthorne Muchachos of Hawthorne, N.J.; the St. Mary's Lancers of Gowans, Md., and the Victorians of Egg Harbor, N.J.

As an added attraction tonight, Elke Christine Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson C. Stevens of 25 Prunewood Road, Plumbridge, Levittown, will be crowned "Miss Musical Jubilee."

A finalist in the 1964 Miss Bucks County beauty pageant, Elke won "Miss Congeniality" in the recent contest at Neshaminy High School.

Were Fourth

The Hawthorne Muchachos, who won every contest in Garden State Circuit competition in 1962 and '63, placed fourth in the Nationals at Miami Beach, Fla., last year. Their color guard holds the New Jersey state title and also won the National Open and Preview championships early this year.

The St. Mary's Lancers, competing since 1955, won the Maryland state junior American Legion championship last year, while the all-girl color guard copped a similar title in '63.

In three short years, the York White Roses have developed into Central Pennsylvania's top junior corps.

Murphy Trophy

The "Pop" Murphy Trophy has been put into competition in honor of the "granddaddy" of drum and bugle corps in the East. Murphy, 73, was the first to introduce popular and semi-classical arrangements for corps. He is responsible for the recent fame of the renowned Reilly Raiders of Philadelphia.

The beautiful trophy for the winning corps will be presented by Murphy. Inscribed on the trophy are the words: "A tribute to 'The General' for endless hours of aid and concern in the building and the perpetuating of outstanding drum and bugle corps and for constant musician."

The trophy must be won three times for permanent possession. The Bracken Cavaliers and Vasella Musketeers each have one leg. Vasella will be out to make it two tonight.

Placed Second

The Levittown Pennsylvanians, organized less than four years ago, attained their pinnacle of success last weekend by placing second in competition at Easton.

Frank J. McCormick, active in drum and bugle corps circles the past 30 years, is director of the Levittown array. In addition to competition, the Pennsylvanians will parade on July 4 and also in the 1964 Lower Bucks County Soap Box Derby on July 12.

Each of the six competing corps tonight will perform on the field for not less than 11 minutes nor more than 13 minutes. The major phases of judging will be done by the Eastern States Judging Association with points awarded for inspection, marching and maneuvering, drumming, bugling and general effect.

Concluding tonight's colorful paeanry will be a massed retreat formation of the six competing corps and the host Levittown Pennsylvanians.

In the event of rain tonight, the Musical Jubilee will take place tomorrow at 8 p.m.

Says 'Bruno Saved Me'

A Levittown man testified yesterday that Angelo Bruno, reputed head of the Cosa Nostra in Philadelphia, "saved" his life by getting a loan shark "off his back."

David Kaplan, 37, a government witness in U.S. District Court, said Bruno interceded in connection with a $13,500 loan which Kaplan and his partners took from Harold Konigsberg of Lodi, N.J.

Kaplan had previously testified that Konigsberg threatened him and his partners if they didn't pay back $25,500 on the loan. Later, he said, the loan shark raised the demand to $46,000.

The money borrowed from Konigsberg was for a down payment on the purchase of the West Philadelphia Jewish Community Center. Kaplan said he later thanked Bruno for saving his life.

Bruno and five other defendants are on trial on charges of interstate extortion.

$5,000 Bail Set In Twp. Beating

William Kehny, 33, accused of the brutal beating of an 80-year old Bristol Township woman, was held last night in $5,000 bail for burglary, assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery, and indecent exposure.

Following the hearing before justice of the peace Rene J. Tritschler, Croydon, Kehny was sent to Bucks County Prison to await court action.

Kehny, who lives at 1013 Beaver St., Bristol, was arrested yesterday morning and charged with attacking and beating Mrs. Emma Booz, mother of Oscar Booz, Bristol Township Democratic Party leader.

Lower Bucks County Hospital today reported Mrs. Booz' condition as "fair." She was admitted with bruises and lacerations of the face and head and a possible concussion.

The attack occurred yesterday morning while Mrs. Booz was in bed in her home at 5900 Mill Creek Road, Bristol Township.

Her son today described the attack as "shocking and brutal" and said only her strong constitution allowed her to survive.

Booz praised the Bristol Township and Bristol Borough police and the Levittown-Fairless Hills Rescue Squad for "their quick action and the way they worked all morning to apprehend the man."

"Too often we're critical of police," Booz said. "We read about these things, but when they're close to home, they give you an entirely different feeling."

Seph O. Canby and Walter S. Farley Jr., minority Democrat, quickly agreed with Bodley.

It was Farley who first said that he was receptive to sponsorship by the board. He agreed however, to study the matter rather than "buy a pig in a poke."

For the past few months, county school officials have advocated commission - sponsorship. Various groups within recent weeks have adopted resolutions requesting the commissioners to take on the venture.

Dr. George E. Raab, county superintendent of schools, was pleased with the news. He commended the board for "providing the leadership" for adopting the project.

Significant Step

Canby called the move "the most significant step the commissioners (the present board) have taken."

Farley said there were problems of financing and accreditation but that "none were insurmountable."

The capital investment (building, land, furniture, equipment etc.) is estimated at $4,000,000, the annual operating costs about $900,000 to $1,000,000. The operating expense is based on a full enrollment of 1,000 students at an individual cost of between $900 to $1,000 annually. The student, state and county each share one-third of the tuition costs.

Sudden Burden

The commissioners agreed that the initial capital investment would impose a sudden financial burden to the county.

However, Bodley said that there may be "other means" of financing the building costs rather than place the complete burden on county taxpayers. He declined to develop this point any further.

He may have been referring to the Educational Facilities Act of 1963, which provides matching funds for capital investment. For every $1,000,000 the federal government will put up, it expects the state and the county to match with $500,000 each. Act 484 — the Community College Act — doesn't provide for state aid for capital. It states merely that the state may reimburse capital up to one-half.

Delhaas Graduate

A 1961 graduate of Delhaas High School, Bristol Township, Ratti was employed by the Far Hills Nursery, Bedminster, N.J., a business owned by his father and uncle.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ratti Sr.; a brother, Robert Ratti; sister, Catherine Ratti, both of West Bristol.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral Monday at 9 a.m. from Murphy's Funeral Home, 1002 Radcliffe St., Bristol.

Requiem High Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. in St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Croydon. Interment will be in Our Lady of Victory cemetery, Landisville, N.J. Friends may call tomorrow evening.

Alexander Monti

Alexander Monti, husband of Angela Trotta Monti of 331 Washington St., Bristol, died yesterday in Delaware Valley Hospital after a short illness. He was 79.

Mr. Monti was born in Italy and was a Bristol resident for 55 years. He was a retired employee of Rohm & Haas.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Monti is survived by four sons, Anthony of Levittown, Lawrence and James of Bristol, and Peter of Medford, N.J.; two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Plebani and Mrs. Anthony C. Manzo of Bristol; 16 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

Relatives and friends are invited to the funeral Tuesday at 9 a.m. from the Galzerano Funeral Home, 430 Radcliffe St., Bristol.

Solemn Requiem Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church. Interment will be in Our Lady of Grace Cemetery, Langhorne.

Friends may call Monday evening.

Die In Crash

Edward Moss of Andover, 41 year old father of three and Kennedy's close friend and aide, died at the hospital of massive brain injuries about seven hours after the accident. The pilot, Edwin T. Zimny, 48, of Lawrence, Mass., died in the crash of the two-engine plane, which was flying from Washington to Westfield, Mass.

Bayh had multiple cuts and an injured right hip. Mrs. Bayh complained of a back pain.

Officials said Moss also suffered multiple fractures of the right leg and right arm. He often was described as "the senator's Dave Powers," the latter having been the ever-present confidant to the late President Kennedy.

Die Violent Deaths

The plane crash occurred less than seven months after the senator's brother, President Kennedy, was assassinated by a sniper's bullet in Dallas. Two other members of the Kennedy family, an older brother, Joseph, and a sister, Kathleen, died in separate plane crashes.

Sen. Kennedy, who earlier had been described as in a state of semi-consciousness, recognized his brother. "How are you, Bobby?" he asked.

Edward Martin, the senator's press secretary, said at 5:45 a.m., EDT — more than five hours after the crash — that Kennedy "is comfortable now and somewhat improved. He is in fair condition."

"The senator is under some sedation," Martin said.

Martin said Bayh and his wife were in "good condition."

Martin said the apparent time of the crash were between 10:55 p.m. and 11:05 p.m. Friday night while the plane was headed for Barnes Airport in nearby Westfield.

From there, Martin said, Kennedy was to pick up his wife at a private home where she was waiting and then go by car to the convention at West Springfield.

The plane slammed into three or four trees on Walter Bashiata's apple farm in this western Massachusetts community.

The vote to impose cloture on the civil rights debate June 10 was 71-29, with 44 Democrats and 27 Republicans in favor and 23 Democrats and 6 Republicans against.

On Friday's vote, Sens. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., and Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, who voted in favor of cloture, voted against the bill.

Sens. Alan Bible, D-Nev., Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, and Milton Young, R-N.D., all of whom voted against cloture, voted in favor of the bill.

Roll Call

Both Democrats and Republicans were holding pre-primaries conventions. The Democratic convention adjourned in stunned silence after the crash.

A few hours earlier Kennedy and Bayh had talked to the Democratic convention by telephone because their departure from Washington was delayed by the Senate vote on the civil rights bill.

The convention had been expected to endorse Kennedy by acclamation.

$150,000 Rehabilitation Unit Hailed As 'Noble Experiment'

A host of county officials, guests, and Bucks County residents attended the dedication of the new $150,000 Rehabilitation Center near Doylestown this afternoon.

Following the ceremonies which began with a flag raising at 1:30 p.m. there were tours of the center until 5 p.m.

In his speech today, John J. Bodley, chairman of the Bucks County Commissioners and the county Prison Board, hailed the Center as a "noble experiment."

"To our knowledge," Bodley said "no rehabilitation project of this type has been tried in a county of this size."

"However, Bucks County is a dynamic, rapidly growing county and our correction program must keep pace with this growth. Other counties will look to us to decide whether such a project will be practical for them."

"The taxpayer has the right to ask whether his money is being used wisely in this noble experiment."

"It is our hope that in time we will enable many of the inmates here to return to society to begin a normal, well adjusted life."

Idea In 1962

Bodley said that the idea for a rehabilitation center was conceived by the prison board in 1962 and has gradually become a reality since Warden John D. Case took over in December of that year and began adopting a modern correction program.

In his welcoming address, Major Case drew from his frequently used expression: "We are in the salvage business."

"It is not enough to dry them out, change their attitude and motivate them," Case said, referring to the 24 inmates who will be treated for alcoholic problems, "we must also retrain them."

Vocational Shops

Case said that vocational shops will be set up within the Center to teach prisoners marketable skills.

A Citizens Division Industries Committee is now studying the problem along with state vocational rehabilitation and employment specialists to decide the best course to follow.

One wing of the center will house youthful and first offenders, the other wing, inmates with problems of alcoholism.

Among the guests at the ceremony were Rear Admiral Russell White (U.S. Navy, retired) of Lower Mountain Road, New Hope, and Maj. Gen. Clayton Vogel, (U.S. Marine Corps, retired), Kellers Church. Both men are octogenarians and have long been interested in the up-dating of the penal system.

Editor In Rome— Does As Romans Do

the past five years. I know less about it than ever before. But its magic becomes more compelling and once away from it, nostalgia becomes increasingly poignant.

Late today I fly to Cairo. But memory of four full days of exposure to the people, the innumerable fountains, the almost uncountable monuments to the past, to the enchanting sidewalk cafes, and to the incomparable restaurants and food for which Rome is particularly known, will make another journey here inevitable, with or without the help of the three lira in the fountain.

Of course, there has been the visit to St. Peter's Basilica, a roundup of the Colosseum, the Forum, the Quirinal Palace, the Aqueducts, the Catacombs, the Pantheon and other legacies of Rome's past, as well as a leisurely drive along the old Appian Way.

Of course, too, there has been the public audience with Pope Paul, attended by 15,000 devout Catholics and a great many people of other faiths from many countries of the world.

These are all very important to developing a perspective of the ancient city.

Yet, there is something else. This is the excitement of Rome, by day and by night, to which every visitor becomes captive, however sophisticated a traveler he may be.

Whether you are promenading the streets by day with occasional moments for the shops, of which there are an astonishing variety, and a tiny cup of Espresso at one of the little intimate outdoor cafes, or out on the town by night, the excitement is very noticeable.

The Romans make it so.

They are an articulate people, eager to please. They build up on the streets and huge piazzas (squares to you uninitiated) impossible traffic jams which ultimately, if excruciatingly slowly, become untangled. They train cab drivers to give you a guaranteed thrill a second. They have a fleet of carriages whose well-fed horses plod along completely unconcerned about the technological age. And at night, they turn on the lights of the city to the extent that you would never know that Italy is having trouble with its power supply.

This is strictly a tourist's commentary, as by now I am sure has become fully evident.

So as a tourist, I can't resist a few old familiar haunts.

Dinner once or twice at the classy Hostaria dell Orso, dating back to the year 1300, and which five years ago installed solid gold dinner service, (if you want it at a price) provides the most excellent food and wines in Rome.

Then, too, lunch or dinner at the old Alfredos, an international style of restaurant to which discriminating travelers pay homage mostly for the first course of fettuccine with a cheese sauce as only Alfredos can do it, bolsters my confidence that some day I may be a gourmet.

Last night I spent a late evening strolling the Via Veneto, the most fashionable street in Rome. It is lined with colorful sidewalk cafes alive with the rich, the near rich, celebrities, and in this instance an American newspaper editor.

The Romans say no one can sit for an hour at one of Via Veneto's cafes without seeing a familiar face or someone he knows.

I tried this out for size for two hours. The whole spectacle itself was a bit on the dazzling side. But I proved the Romans wrong. No familiar face, no friends. Sort of a frustrating evening.

Everything Set For Levittown's 3rd Music Jubilee

By SCOOP LEWIS
Courier-Times Staff Writer

Six stand-out drum and bugle corps from three states will compete tonight in the third annual Levittown Musical Jubilee under the lights at the Bristol Township Athletic Field.

Defending their title won last year will be the Vasella Musketeers of Philadelphia who will be seeking top prize of $300 and a second leg on the C. Russell (Pop) Murphy Trophy.

Tonight's competition, being staged by the Parents Association of the Levittown Junior Drum and Bugle Corps, will commence at 8 o'clock on the Woodward Wilson High School football field located at Green

Lane and Mill Creek Road, Levittown.

Exhibition

Besides the six corps competing for over $1,000 in prizes, the host Levittown corps, "The Pennsylvanians," will perform in exhibition tonight. The 70 local boys and girls, ranging in age from seven to 17 years, will be led by their popular drum major, William (Little Wild Bill) Toomey of Harrisburg.

Another large throng is expected to witness the precision marching, blare of bugles and snare of drums tonight. Some 2,500 spectators saw the Robert W. Bracken American Legion Post 382 Cavaliers of Bristol win a "photo finish" victory over the St. Catherine's Queensmen of St. Albans, N.Y., in the first Jubilee two years ago. Last year, 3,000 persons sat in hot, humid 87-degree temperatures as the Vasella Musketeers upended the Bracken Cavaliers in another hair-line decision.

Besides the Vasella Musketeers, corps competing tonight will be the Belles of St. Mary's of Gloucester, N.J.; the York White Roses of York, Pa.; the Hawthorne Muchachos of Hawthorne, N.J.; the St. Mary's Lancers of Gowans, Md.; and the Victorians of Egg Harbor, N.J.

As an added attraction tonight, Elke Christine Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson C. Stevens of 25 Prunewood Road, Plumbridge, Levittown, will be crowned "Miss Musical Jubilee."

A finalist in the 1964 Miss Bucks County beauty pageant, Elke won "Miss Congeniality" in the recent contest at Neshaminy High School.

Were Fourth

The Hawthorne Muchachos, who won every contest in Garden State Circuit competition in 1962 and '63, placed fourth in the Nationals at Miami Beach, Fla., last year. Their color guard holds the New Jersey state title and also won the National Open and Preview championships early this year.

The St. Mary's Lancers, competing since 1955, won the Maryland state junior American Legion championship last year, while the all-girl color guard copped a similar title in '63.

In three short years, the York White Roses have developed into Central Pennsylvania's top junior corps.

The "Pop" Murphy Trophy has been put into competition in honor of the "granddaddy" of drum and bugle corps in the East. Murphy, 73, was the first to introduce popular and semi-classical arrangements for corps. He is responsible for the recent fame of the renowned Reilly Raiders of Philadelphia.

The plane crash occurred less than seven months after the senator's brother, President Kennedy, was assassinated by a sniper's bullet in Dallas. Two other members of the Kennedy family, an older brother, Joseph, and a sister, Kathleen, died in separate plane crashes.

Sen. Kennedy, who earlier had been described as in a state of semi-consciousness, recognized his brother. "How are you, Bobby?" he asked.

Edward Martin, the senator's press secretary, said at 5:45 a.m., EDT — more than five hours after the crash — that Kennedy "is comfortable now and somewhat improved. He is in fair condition."

"The senator is under some sedation," Martin said. Martin said Bayh and his wife were in "good condition."

Martin said the apparent time of the crash were between 10:55 p.m. and 11:05 p.m. Friday night while the plane was headed for Barnes Airport in nearby Westfield.

From there, Martin said, Kennedy was to pick up his wife at a private home where she was waiting and then go by car to the convention at West Springfield.

The plane slammed into three or four trees on Walter Bashiata's apple farm in this western Massachusetts community.

Roll Call

Keating, Kuchel, Miller, Morton, Mundt, Pearson, Prouty, Saltonstall, Scott, Smith, Williams of Del. and Young of N.D. Against the bill — 27.

Democrats against — (21) — Byrd of Va., Byrd of W. Va., Eastland, Ellender, Ervin, Fulbright, Gore, Hill, Holland, Johnston, Jordan of N.C., Long of La., McClellan, Robertson, Russell, Smathers, Sparkman, Stennis, Talmadge, Thurmond and Walters.

Republicans against — (6) — Cotton, Goldwater, Hickenlooper, Mechem, Simpson and Tower.

The vote to impose cloture on the civil rights debate June 10 was 71-29, with 44 Democrats and 27 Republicans in favor and 23 Democrats and 6 Republicans against.

On Friday's vote, Sens. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., and Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, who voted in favor of cloture, voted against the bill.

Sens. Alan Bible, D-Nev., Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, and Milton Young, R-N.D., all of whom voted against cloture, voted in favor of the bill.

The plane crumbled. The right wing was nearly ripped off. The cockpit was peeled off and the nose was smashed in.

A visitor to Kennedy's hospital bedside early today said the senator was in a "state of semi-consciousness." However, a hospital spokesman said his condition was fair to good.

The crash occurred less than seven months after the senator's brother, the late President Kennedy, was assassinated by a sniper's bullet in Dallas.

The crash was the latest in a chain of tragedies and near tragedies in the Kennedy family. The oldest brother was killed in combat in World War II and a sister was killed in a plane crash shortly after her husband died in the war.

The father, Joseph P. Kennedy, who suffered a stroke in 1962, is partially paralyzed.

Sen. Kennedy apparently was thrown out of the plane. James Pease, 21, one of the first persons to arrive at the crash scene, said Kennedy was "on the ground, semi-conscious."

Both Democrats and Republicans were holding pre-primary conventions. The Democratic convention adjourned in stunned silence after the crash.

A few hours earlier Kennedy and Bayh had talked to the Democratic convention by telephone because their departure from Washington was delayed by the Senate vote on the civil rights bill.

The convention had been expected to endorse Kennedy by acclamation.

Vocational Shops

Case said that vocational shops will be set up within the Center to teach prisoners marketable skills.

A Citizens Division Industries Committee is now studying the problem along with state vocational rehabilitation and employment specialists to decide the best course to follow.

One wing of the center will house youthful and first offenders, the other wing, inmates with problems of alcoholism.

Among the guests at the ceremony were Rear Admiral Russell White (U.S. Navy, retired) of Lower Mountain Road, New Hope, and Maj. Gen. Clayton Vogel, (U.S. Marine Corps, retired), Kellers Church. Both men are octogenarians and have long been interested in the updating of the penal system.

Editor In Rome— Does As Romans Do

the past five years. I know less about it than ever before. But its magic becomes more compelling and once away from it, nostalgia becomes increasingly poignant.

Late today I fly to Cairo. But memory of four full days of exposure to the people, the innumerable fountains, the almost uncountable monuments to the past, to the enchanting sidewalk cafes, and to the incomparable restaurants and food for which Rome is particularly known, will make another journey here inevitable, with or without the help of the three lira in the fountain.

Of course, there has been the visit to St. Peter's Basilica, a roundup of the Colosseum, the Forum, the Quirinal Palace, the Aqueducts, the Catacombs, the Pantheon and other legacies of Rome's past, as well as a leisurely drive along the old Appian Way.

Of course, too, there has been the public audience with Pope Paul, attended by 15,000 devout Catholics and a great many people of other faiths from many countries of the world.

These are all very important to developing a perspective of the ancient city.

Yet, there is something else. This is the excitement of Rome, by day and by night, to which every visitor becomes captive, however sophisticated a traveler he may be.

Whether you are promenading the streets by day with occasional moments for the shops, of which there are an astonishing variety, and a tiny cup of Espresso at one of the little intimate outdoor cafes, or out on the town by night, the excitement is very noticeable.

The Romans make it so.

They are an articulate people, eager to please. They build up on the streets and huge piazzas (squares to you uninitiated) impossible traffic jams which ultimately, if excruciatingly slowly, become untangled. They train cab drivers to give you a guaranteed thrill a second. They have a fleet of carriages whose well-fed horses plod along completely unconcerned about the technological age. And at night, they turn on the lights of the city to the extent that you would never know that Italy is having trouble with its power supply.

This is strictly a tourist's commentary, as by now I am sure has become fully evident.

So as a tourist, I can't resist a few old familiar haunts.

Dinner once or twice at the classy Hostaria dell Orso, dating back to the year 1300, and which five years ago installed solid gold dinner service, (if you want it at a price) provides the most excellent food and wines in Rome.

Then, too, lunch or dinner at the old Alfredo's, an international style of restaurant to which discriminating travelers pay homage mostly for the first course of fettuccine with a cheese sauce as only Alfredo's can do it, bolsters my confidence that some day I may be a gourmet.

Last night I spent a late evening strolling the Via Veneto, the most fashionable street in Rome. It is lined with colorful sidewalk cafes alive with the rich, the near rich, celebrities, and in this instance an American newspaper editor.

The Romans say no one can sit for an hour at one of Via Veneto's cafes without seeing a familiar face or someone he knows.

I tried this out for size for two hours. The whole spectacle itself was a bit on the dazzling side. But I proved the Romans wrong. No familiar face, no friends. Sort of a frustrating evening.
